E-Landscape Specialty Solutions had the honor of designing and installing the landscape for the largest project in the history of the television series 'Extreme Makeover: Home Edition.' Our experienced and approachable style, our ability to effectively communicate and our utilization of the latest technologies were a few of the reasons we were selected to work with show host Ty Pennington and his team on a new, 11,120 square foot group home for girls for Boys Hope Girls Hope, a Baltimore-based organization that provides at-risk youth with a group home style setting.

E-Landscape's scope of work included the development of an original landscape design, as well as installation of that design within the tight timetable that is the signature of 'Extreme Makeover: Home Edition.' The landscape we designed included plantings and sod, stone wall construction, landscape lighting and an irrigation system. Installation took approximately 36 hours and our employees worked 12 hour shifts throughout the night and into the next day to complete the project. We are particularly proud to have completed work on a "photo ready" landscape in time for the show's taping despite torrential rains during installation and a tight working schedule.
